4.5 Hour Ride • 16 MPH Average Speed

The Fremont ATV Trail travels through Southwestern Utah's Dixie National Forest, offering cool forested rides, red rock formations, abundant wildlife, and sweeping views from the high plateaus. Vegetation varies with the terrain, ranging from sage brush to ponderosa pine and aspens.

The Fremont ATV Trail travels over 65 miles between Circleville and Tropic Reservoir, linking the Paiute ATV Trail in Circleville, and the Pausanagout ATV Trail near Bryce Canyon. Access to the Bryce Canyon area and Ruby's Inn is a short, easy ride from the Fremont ATV Trail through Daves Hollow. Ruby's Inn offers all services including gasoline, lodging, food and some mechanical repairs and services. ATVs, OHVs and UTVs are not permitted in nearby Bryce Canyon National Park.

The northern end of the Fremont ATV Trail starts in Circleville. The signed trailhead is located at 400 South and about 100 East. When starting out on the trail, head straight south across Circle Valley, then start climbing through Dixie National Forest. The route will drop down at the bottom of Smith Canyon, head south, then will connect with Sanford Canyon and climb eastward again. Stay on the main route when you get to the Limekiln Canyon turnoff. The area between Limekiln Canyon, Sanford and Smith Canyons is rugged and remote.

Continue on the main route. A junction will take you on side trips to Peterson Point and to Casto Canyon. To stay on the Fremont ATV Trail continue southeast. DO NOT take Corral Hollow or Cabin Hollow, as these trails are not designed for ATVs. Instead, follow Berry Spring
